Arnold Daly's Jealousy "Out-Mansfields" Richard. Bruised Actress Says

Jennie Eustace Going to Leave Company, But Actor Denies Everything.

NEW YORK, April 24.—That he "out-Mansfields" Richard is the charge which Miss Jennie Eustace has lodged against Arnold Daly, the star of "The Boys of Company B," in which the two are appearing at the Lyceum Theater. As a result of the actress' complaint she will leave the company May 1. In the meantime Daly, who already has some reputation as a scrapper and indiscreet hurler of stale beer, is busy explaining to fellow members of the Lambs' Club that he never struck the lady.

In one scene of "The Boys of Company B" Miss Eustace, who is Daly's stage mother-in-law, is backed through a door by the star. According to the actress' claims, exceptionally generous applause which she received the other evening during the scene caused Daly to take hold of her hand and hasten her exit.

The next evening she says the star became further angered and seized her by the shoulder forcing her through the door so roughly as to leave black and blue spots on her shoulder.

Then came the rub. Each of the principals in the little feud took it on the run for Manager Frohman's office. Daly got there first. Miss Eustace will resign.

SHOT TO KILL, SAYS AVENGER OF DAUGHTER

Drugged and Dishonored, Girl Maddens Father With Story.

Prompt Vengeance of Judge Loving Upon
Theodore Estes.

Judge Loving's Statement

When I heard the awful story from the lips of my dear one I was insane. I waited to learn all the facts, and then nothing in the power of God or man could have stopped me from taking his life. I did it after careful consideration.

OAK RIDGE, Va., April 24.—Oak Ridge and the neighboring country are deeply stirred, not only by the prompt vengeance of Judge Loving, the maddened father, but also by the story of the offense which led to death of Theodore Estes. In it are the dishonor to a young and beautiful woman, the belle of the whole region, accomplished and a daring horsewoman; her thoughtless start for a drive from the house of the girl friend whom she was visiting; her return, stupefied by drugs with the numb sense in her dulled brain that she was disgraced forever; her stammered confession to her horrified mother, the awful words of which she repeated later to her father, who, in mad haste, rushed forth upon his mission of vengeance.

Sister of Theodore Estes, who had drugged and dishonored his daughter, Former Judge W. G. Loving, manager of the great Ryan estate here, has been admitted to bail in the sum of $5,000. Thomas F. Ryan telegraphed that he was ready to furnish bail to any amount, but his aid was unnecessary, as neighbors of the judge came forward at once and bail was allowed by Bail Commissioner Payne, of Amherst county, adjoining Nelson county, where the killing was done.

Drugged and Dishonored.

Elizabeth Loving was the guest on Sunday of Miss Annie Kidd, daughter of the county clerk. In the afternoon, Theodore Estes drove over from the house of his father, Sheriff M. K. Estes, where he lived, and took Miss Kidd for a drive. On their return Estes proposed that Miss Loving accompany him for a short spin. Miss Loving readily assented and entered the buggy.

It was on that drive that Estes prepared the way for his death at the hand of Elizabeth's father. Not all that happened has been told, for the girl was drugged and the man is dead, but the grim foundations of the tragedy were laid, to be cemented in the blood of the victim.

It was half past eight o'clock when Estes brought his victim back to the house. Her father, Judge Loving, found her condition such that she could not descend from the buggy without assistance, and once on the ground she tottered and had to be half carried to her room. She was suffering intensely and could give no account of what had occurred. To reduce her to such a state, a physician, Dr. Strother, was called in, and for the first time the horrible truth was made known.

Mother Learns Truth.

A message was sent on Monday to Mrs. Loving that her daughter was ill, and she sent word for her to be taken home, but Elizabeth replied that she could not go unless her mother came to accompany her. Mrs. Loving accordingly hurried over to the Kidd house and drove back to Oak Ridge with her unhappy daughter.

On that ride Elizabeth told with sobs and tears the fearful experience through which she had passed, wringing her mother's heart with the truth about the black conduct of the destroyer of her happiness.

As soon as mother and daughter reached Oak Ridge the story was repeated to the judge. Maddened with fury at the outrage upon his daughter, the frantic father loaded both barrels of a shotgun with buckshot, and drove as fast as his horse could take him to find young Estes and inflict upon him summary vengeance.

Judge Finds Estes.

At Livingston he went to the store of Estes & Co. and inquired for "Taylor," as Theodore Estes was commonly known. He was told that the young man was at the railway station helping unload a box car.

The judge hurried to the station. There he found Estes in a box car, superintending the work of two negroes. Striding directly to the car the judge ordered the negroes out of the way and cried out to Estes.

"So, you were out buggy riding last night, were you? You'll never harm another woman."

"No, no," cried Estes at the sight of the shotgun.

Neck Almost Severed.

Judge Loving raised the gun and fired. The first load contained seventeen buckshot, and penetrated the right side. The second, which was fired deliberately, struck Estes in the neck, almost severing his head. Estes managed to gasp, "Help me!" and was dead.

Thomas McGinnis, owner of Hotel McGinnis, heard the firing and ran toward the car.

Loving turned calmly toward him, and said, "It's no use. He's dead. I shot to kill."

The judge immediately gave himself (Continued on Second Page.)

Burton, Chief Taft Counsel, Plans to Deny Lukewarmness Of President, Friday Night

TRENTON SPEECH TO BE FOLLOWED BY A STATEMENT

Want Ohio Primaries
Not Later Than November.

Representative Burton of Ohio, chief counsel in the Taft Presidential campaign, will take the opportunity Friday night, in his address before the Republican clubs of Trenton, N. J., to boost the Taft boom, and to put to rest reports that the President has of late grown lukewarm in his attitude toward the Secretary of War as his successor at the White House.

The address will be an encore to the Taft nominating speech delivered by Mr. Burton in Cleveland before Senator Foraker came out as a challenger for Presidential honors. The remarks of Mr. Burton will be intended also to offset the avowed support which Senator Dick has given Senator Foraker.

To Be Followed by Statement.

The Trenton speech is to be followed by a statement by the Cleveland Congressman, covering local conditions in Ohio. As official booster for the Taft boom, Burton will insist that Foraker stand pat on his request for a primary, and cause Senator Dick, in command of the Republican organization in the State, to call a primary for not later than November.

Since the return of the Taft party from Panama, it has been decided that Burton will be the chief spokesman for Taft in the Ohio campaign.

Taft will hold aloof from the controversy in accordance with his view of the dignity which should surround a Presidential candidate. As Senator Foraker will make issues of railroad legislation and the Brownsville affair, so will the Secretary at some time between now and the first of September deliver speeches on these subjects. They will not be in Ohio, however, but probably in Minnesota and Iowa, and will be delivered from the standpoint of defense of the Administration and not as coming from a Presidential candidate.

Will Preserve His Dignity.

By this course Secretary Taft will not only preserve his dignity as a candidate, but will defend his policies and will so closely identify himself with the course of the Administration that no one else can claim the support of the President in the national convention.

By declining to engage personally in a rough-and-tumble fight for the favor of the Buckeye State, Secretary Taft leaves open the possibility of going into the convention without the Ohio delegation.

In Case Foraker Wins.

Should Foraker win out in the Ohio primaries, Taft would still be urged in other States, and while his candidacy would be handicapped, his friends, and particularly Representative Burton, believe he would still be in the running.

Secretary Taft is expected to repudiate the inference given in a statement made public by his brother, Charles P. Taft, to the effect that the Secretary would be a candidate for the Senate against Foraker. Some believe that Representative Burton will soon announce his candidacy for the Senate to succeed Foraker, and couple that fight with the Taft campaign in Ohio.

MARVIN MURDER ARREST

Charge Frank H. Butler
With Killing Little Horace.

Prisoner Last to See
Boy Day He Was Missed.

Asserts Innocence

If I ever carried off that kid in a bag or in any other way, I did not know it. Before God I am innocent. I would not have harmed a hair of his head for the world.—Frank H. Butler.

DOVER, Del., April 24.—Frank H. Butler, second mate on the steamer John P. Wilson, of the Dover and Philadelphia Navigation Company's line, was arrested on board that craft at 4:30 o'clock this morning, charged with the murder of Horace N. Marvin, Jr., the four-year-old son of Dr. Marvin, who mysteriously disappeared from his home at Bay Mead, ows on March 4.

This sensational climax of the kidnapping case, which has puzzled the police of Delaware and neighboring States since the disappearance of the child, came as a result of investigations by Frank H. Lore and James Hawkins, State detectives, respectively, of New Jersey and Delaware.

Armed with a warrant issued on Monday, under the direction of the Kent county grand jury and Attorney General Richards, Lore and Hawkins, with another New Jersey detective, Woodruff, boarded the John P. Wilson last night at the departure from Arch street wharf, Philadelphia, for Lebanon, a town four miles from Dover.

Waiting until the vessel got well within Delaware territory, Hawkins secured the warrant upon Butler, just after the boat left Bowers' Beach and was proceeding up the Delaware River on the last stage of her all-night trip.

Denies His Guilt.

Taking his arrest coolly, Butler suffered himself to be led to a state room, where for the remaining three hours of the journey he was put through a sweat-box inquisition at the hands of Lore and Hawkins. He stoutly denied all knowledge of the reason for the child's disappearance.

When the steamer landed at Lebanon, the prisoner and his captors were driven rapidly to Dover in carriages which had been sent to meet them, and Butler was at once arraigned before Edward F. Wood, the justice of the peace who issued the warrant for his arrest.

While a large crowd of excited citizens struggled to get into the little hearing room, Butler, upon brief testimony from the detectives, was held to await further investigation.

Father Certain of Guilt.

When asked, after three hours' work with the accused man, if he has succeeded in getting anything important from him, Detective Lore replied laconically: "Just wait; I haven't started yet."

It is said that Butler has made a signed statement and given it to Detective Lore.

Following the arrest of Butler, Dr. Horace Marvin expressed his belief to-day that his long-lost boy is dead.

"I believe that Butler killed my boy and in fear hid the body," Dr. Marvin said, "and we are going to try to get him to tell where the body is."

The authorities expect a full confession before the day is over. Butler, who has admitted to being the last person to see little Horace Marvin alive, was glad that he was arrested and intimated that he would make a complete statement.

Butler Woodall's Companion.

Butler helped Charles Woodall, who sold the farm to Dr. Marvin, move the doctor's furniture to the house, and on the morning of March 4, when the boy was rushed, he was with Woodall, and two helpers, Verden and Caldwell, removing Woodall's grain from the barn. He also helped to stack the grain, a moving machine was used, and he reported having seen Horace last on top of a straw stack and later on that he had seen him on the ground.

Gone 3 Weeks, 12-Year-Old Boy May Be Kidnaped

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 24.—Mid-dietown has a child disappearance mystery similar to that of young Marvin in Delaware. The parents of Charles Krodel, aged twelve years, have been searching in vain for over three weeks, and have given up hope of ever seeing the lad alive.

The boy disappeared on the first anniversary of the drowning of an eight-year-old brother, who lost his life in a mill race. He was last seen at home, it was thought that Charles might have met a similar fate, but a search of the stream has failed to show any trace of the boy.

Men Coaxed Horace Away,
Then Put Him on Train

To the Editor of The Washington Times: I have been reading carefully The Washington Times about Horace Marvin. I am very much interested in the case. I imagine it must be dreadful

DIPLOMATS GO TO JAMESTOWN IN YACHT FLEET

Mayflower, Carrying the President's Party, Will Lead the Way Tomorrow.

Between 2:30 and 6 o'clock tomorrow afternoon a small official fleet of war, maritime and pleasure craft will sail from Washington down the Potomac to the Jamestown Exposition. In the fleet will be at least half a dozen vessels, headed by two gunboat yachts and a revenue cutter.

The first to sail from Washington will be the Mayflower, carrying the President and his party. None of the other vessels will be permitted to pass or draw near to this vessel.

The second to start will be the Dolphin, which will carry Secretary of the Navy Metcalf and his party of personally invited naval officials, members of Congress, and friends.

The steamer Newport News will leave at 6 o'clock, carrying members of the Cabinet and the foreign diplomats under the personal escort of Huntington Wilson, third Assistant Secretary of State. The steamer Jamestown will carry the official Congressional party.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Edwards and several lay party will go down on a revenue cutter. Other parties of naval officials and their friends will make the trip during the day on navy yachts.

Large numbers of Washington people having large sailing yachts will make the trip during the day, carrying parties of friends.

Complete plans at last have been made for the departure of the official parties from Washington to the exposition, and by the close of today the invited guests will be officially informed as to the arrangements. Owing to a condition of chaos that has been manifest in all branches of the Government where arrangements were being made to enter.

THE WEATHER REPORT.

The Mississippi valley storm of Tuesday morning has moved to the coast of Maine, with gusty and heavy rain. It has caused high winds and squalls in the Ohio valley, the Middle Atlantic States, and generally along the Atlantic coast from Florida to New England. Rain has fallen in the lake region, the Ohio valley, and the Atlantic coast districts, and snow in the Rocky mountain region, north of Colorado. The temperature is 10 to 14 degrees below the seasonal average in the northern Rocky mountain region, the lower lake region, and the Ohio valley.

Fair weather is probable tonight and Thursday in the South and in Atlantic coast districts. Rain is indicated for the Ohio valley and the lower lake region. It will be slightly colder tonight in the Middle Atlantic States.

Storm warnings are displayed from Hatteras to Eastport.

Steamers departing today for European ports will have brisk to high westerly winds and fair weather to the Grand Banks.
